GENERAL INTERNAL MEDICINE (GIM) ACADEMIC PRACTICE AND LEADERSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

Kelowna General Hospital, Kelowna, BC

Kelowna General Hospital (KGH) is seeking three general internists to join one established academic internist at BC's 350-bed KGH. KGH offers a full range of clinical services and a campus that includes the recently opened state-of-the-art Centennial Building, a new ambulatory care facility, and an innovative Heart and Surgical Centre, currently under construction.

As a member of the Division of Internal Medicine you will provide comprehensive, patient-centered care on the hospital's 25-bed Medical Teaching Unit (MTU) where your presence will ensure that undergraduate students and residents have effective, stimulating learning opportunities. Clinical duties will also include consult services to in-patient wards and the Emergency Department (ED), as well as regular clinical practice in the Rapid Access Medical Assessment Clinic (RAMAC) for urgent consults from the ED and timely post-discharge follow-up visits.

If you are an excellent clinical and academic internist looking for a new challenge, ready to combine that experience with a leadership role as part of a new medical teaching service at one of BC's most progressive tertiary hospitals, this is an outstanding opportunity. It is a chance to help establish an Academic Division of General Internal Medicine from the ground up, in partnership with the University of British Columbia's Faculty of Medicine and Southern Medical Program (SMP).

Educational responsibilities encompass both direct-patient-care and non-patient-care environments, and include bedside and office teaching; clinical skills training; development of teaching materials; learner performance review and feedback; Objective Structured Clinical Exams (OSCEs) and oral exams; learner portfolio review, and attendance at SMP meetings. Division members will also fulfill four leadership roles: GIM Division Head, MTU Director, Internal Medicine Clerkship Site Leader, and Postgraduate Site Program Director. These roles will be shared equitably among the four division members.

As a preferred candidate you will possess outstanding communication, teaching, organizational and interpersonal skills that enable you to work collaboratively with other physicians, learners, hospital staff and administrators. You are innovative and enjoy the delivery of quality clinical care. You have demonstrated excellence in teaching and are excited to provide leadership to the undergraduate and postgraduate teaching programs. You have also undertaken additional studies in medical education, or have administrative experience with good organizational and time-management skills, and the ability to work in a complex university and hospital environment. Qualifications include an MD degree or equivalent, RCPSC Fellowship in Internal Medicine and eligibility for full licensure in the province of British Columbia. At least three to five years' experience in GIM is preferred, although internists with sub-specialty training who have been practicing GIM part time, but who are willing to move to full time, will be considered.

Competitive compensation is supported through an alternate-payment plan combined with other remuneration sources and incentives. Successful candidates will be required to sign a practice-plan agreement for the clinical, academic and administrative services provided.

Applications will be accepted until suitable candidates are identified, with an ideal start date on or before July 1st, 2013, when the Southern Medical Program's first Clinical-Clerkship cohort begins. If interested, please send a confidential letter of interest and resume to:
